Elon Musk unveils new Mars rocket prototype, expects missions in months

SpaceX CEO also named first private passenger of "Starship."

Billionaire entrepreneur Elon Musk has unveiled the latest iteration of his space company's newly assembled Starship, outlining a speedy development timeline for the centerpiece vehicle of SpaceX's quest to launch humans to the moon and Mars.

Musk showed a crowd of space enthusiasts and reporters at SpaceX's rocket development site late on Saturday in the remote village of Boca Chica, Texas, animations of Starship landing on the moon and Mars and predicted that the rocket's first orbital flight could come in the next six months, followed by missions to space with humans aboard the next year.

"This is basically the holy grail of space," Musk said, standing between a towering, newly assembled Starship rocket and Falcon 1 — the company's first vehicle whose debut orbital mission was celebrated by SpaceX 11 years ago.

"The critical breakthrough that's needed for us to become a space-faring civilization is to make space travel like air travel," said Musk, who is also the chief executive of electric carmaker Tesla Inc.

Starship, a shiny steel rocketship designed to ferry dozens of humans to the moon and Mars, is the top half of Musk's colossal interplanetary rocket system that stands 387 feet tall (118 meters) as the latest addition to SpaceX's lineup of reusable launch vehicles. Musk named Japanese billionaire Yusaku Maezawa as Starship's first private passenger in 2018.

The Boca Chica village, a few miles north of the Mexican border, is ground zero for SpaceX's three-year experimental test program for Starship, whose rocket engine tests have rattled the nerves of residents living in a remote hamlet of roughly two dozen homes a mile away.

Musk's mission to the moon aligns with NASA's goal of sending humans there by 2024 under its Artemis program, an accelerated deep-space initiative spurred by the Trump administration in March that aims to work with a handful of U.S. space companies in building a long-term presence on the lunar surface before eventually colonizing Mars.

The space agency has tapped SpaceX to figure out how to land vehicles on the lunar surface and help develop a system for refueling rockets — like Starship — in space, an "important technology to aid sustained exploration efforts on the Moon and Mars," NASA said in a release on Friday. REUTERS

Drake lends $185 million jet to Kings for trip to India

2 The Sacramento Kings will be making the 20-hour trip to India in luxury. The Kings and the Indiana Pacers will meet Friday and Saturday in the first NBA games to be played in the country, and the rapper Drake is lending his $185 million Boeing 767-200ER "Air Drake" to the Kings for the trip. Team owner Vivek Ranadive arranged for the swanky ride. "They wanted to get the best available option, and they nailed it," coach Luke Walton told KXTV in Sacramento. The players were appreciative of the efforts. "Vivek definitely pushed to get us a better plane, and he did that, so we're very grateful to have an owner like that," point guard De'Aaron Fox said. "Coaches have been proactive in saying that it's going to be a long flight," veteran Harrison Barnes said. "There's going to be a lot of film being watched." REUTERS

Coleman crowned world's fastest man with 100m win

3 American Christian Coleman scorched to the 100 meters world championship gold medal on Saturday to be crowned the world's fastest man. Coleman, runner-up to Justin Gatlin two years ago in London, did his part to send a jolt of excitement through a thin audience by turning the tables on his teammate in a season's best 9.76 seconds, making him the sixth-fastest man of all time. "Last time it was a surprise when I won silver. This time there was a lot of pressure but I managed to come out with a gold," Coleman told reporters. "At the end all my worries evaporated out there. It was [a] crazy feeling. To add my name to the list of legendary guys who've come before me is an honor and a blessing." The 37-year-old Gatlin continued to prove he is one of sprinting's big-time performers, however, grabbing silver in 9.89. REUTERS

British PM Johnson vows to stay put for Oct. 31 Brexit

4 Boris Johnson said on Sunday he would not quit as Britain's prime minister even if he fails to secure a deal to leave the European Union, insisting only his Conservative government can deliver Brexit on Oct. 31. At the beginning of his party's annual conference in the northern English city of Manchester, Johnson wants to rally his party with a "do or die" message that he will deliver Brexit by the end of October, with or without a deal. But there are hurdles to clear, not the least of which is what Johnson calls "the surrender act" — a law parliament passed to force the prime minister to request a Brexit delay if he has not secured a deal with Brussels by an Oct. 17-18 E.U. summit. "People can feel that this country is approaching an important moment of choice and we have to get on and we have to deliver Brexit on October the 31st ... I'm going to get on and do it," he told BBC television. REUTERS

Pelosi: Public opinion shifting in support of impeachment inquiry

Speaker says her resistance turned to endorsement after whistleblower complaint.

REUTERS

U.S. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi said on Saturday that public opinion is now on the side of an impeachment inquiry against President Donald Trump following the release of new information about his conversations with Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky.

Pelosi this week announced her support for an investigation after the surfacing of a whistleblower complaint that said Trump appeared to solicit a political favor from Ukraine's president aimed at helping him be re-elected next year.

Pelosi for months took a cautious approach in weighing the calls of other Democratic House members to launch impeachment proceedings against Trump, which grew louder after former Special Counsel Robert Mueller testified on July 24 about his probe of Trump and Russian interference in the 2016 election.

"In the public, the tide has completely changed; it could change now — who knows — but right now, after seeing the complaint and the IG (Inspector General) report and the cavalier attitude the administration had towards it, the American people are coming to a different decision," Pelosi said at a journalism event hosted by the Texas Tribune news website.

She added that her resistance to holding an impeachment inquiry quickly evolved from urging that fellow Democrats remain cautious of the political fallout ahead of next year's elections to full steam ahead as details emerged of Trump's dealings with Ukraine's leader.

"A president of the United States would withhold military assistance paid for by taxpayers to shake down the leader of another country unless he did him a political favor — that is so, so clear," Pelosi said.

In a July 25 telephone call between Trump and Zelensky, the U.S. leader asked his counterpart to launch an investigation of Democratic presidential hopeful Joe Biden and his son, Hunter, who had served on the board of a Ukrainian energy company.

Both Bidens have denied any wrongdoing.

Trump has blasted the impeachment inquiry, arguing that he did nothing wrong and accusing Democrats of launching a politically motivated "witch hunt."

Lawmakers in the Democratic-led House of Representatives are investigating concerns that Trump's actions have jeopardized national security and the integrity of U.S. elections.

The impeachment inquiry has cast a new pall over Trump's presidency just months after he emerged from the shadow cast by Mueller's investigation.

"If the facts are persuasive to the American people, they may be to some Republicans," Pelosi said during the event.

Pelosi would not forecast how long it may take for the House to complete any possible impeachment proceedings against Trump.

"It will take as long as the Intelligence Committee needs to follow all the facts," she said.

Several Democratic presidential candidates attended the three-day event in Austin, including Mayor Pete Buttigieg, former Rep. Beto O'Rourke, Sen. Amy Klobuchar and former Housing Secretary Julian Castro, all of whom agreed with Pelosi that the campaign to push Trump from office must focus on policies and not impeachment.

While some polls have shown Americans are split on supporting impeachment, Castro, who served under former President Barack Obama, said he thinks the public will increasingly back the inquiry.

> "If the facts are persuasive to the American people, they may be to some Republicans."
> House Speaker Nancy Pelosi

"Like in Watergate, after more evidence gets out there ... you'll see more people of different political stripes start to support it," Castro said at the event, referring to moves in 1974 to impeach former President Richard Nixon.

Trump–Putin phone calls in Democrats' sights: Schiff

Congress is determined to get access to Donald Trump's calls with Russian President Vladimir Putin and other world leaders, the chairman of the U.S. House Intelligence Committee said on Sunday, citing concerns the Republican president may have jeopardized national security.

"I think the paramount need here is to protect the national security of the United States and see whether in the conversations with other world leaders, and in particular with Putin, that the president was also undermining our security in a way that he thought would personally benefit his campaign," Democrat Adam Schiff said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Congress is investigating a whistleblower complaint that said Trump solicited a political favor from Ukraine's president that could help him get re-elected to a second term next year. Democrats say Trump's actions jeopardized national security and the integrity of U.S. elections.

The whistleblower's complaint cited a telephone call in which Trump asked President Volodymyr Zelensky to launch an investigation of former Vice President Joe Biden, a leader among Democrats seeking to challenge Trump in 2020, and his son Hunter. Hunter Biden sat on the board of a Ukrainian gas company.

The July 25 phone call came shortly after the United States froze nearly $400 million in aid to Ukraine, prompting concern that Trump was using the taxpayer money already approved by Congress as leverage for his personal political gain.

The complaint said White House lawyers directed that an electronic summary of the call be moved from the place where such things are usually kept to a secret server reserved for covert matters.

> "If there's an effort to hide those [conversations] and cover those up, yes we're determined to find out."
> House Intelligence Committee Chair Adam Schiff

"If those conversations with Putin or with other world leaders are sequestered in that same electronic file that is meant for covert action, not meant for this, if there's an effort to hide those and cover those up, yes we're determined to find out," Schiff said on NBC.

Schiff did not say whether he plans to subpoena that information. The White House did not respond to a request for comment on Schiff's statement that he wanted access to the call summaries."

The Ukraine scandal cast a shadow over Trump's presidency just months after the conclusion of Special Counsel Robert Mueller's investigation of whether the Trump campaign worked with Russia to help him win the 2016 presidential election.

That investigation concluded that Moscow waged a social media and propaganda campaign aimed at putting Trump in the White House. The Mueller report, released in April, laid out numerous contacts between Russian officials and Trump's campaign, but found no evidence of a criminal conspiracy.

The Ukraine matter prompted Democratic House of Representatives Speaker Nancy Pelosi to launch an impeachment inquiry against Trump on Tuesday. REUTERS

NYPD officer on anti-gang duty shot, killed during arrest

Fatal shots fired during ground struggle with armed suspect in the Bronx.

A New York city police officer on anti-gang duty and a suspect he was trying to arrest were both killed during an exchange of gunfire in the Bronx early Sunday, police said.

Officer Brian Mulkeen, 33, was rushed to hospital where he was pronounced dead, police said in a statement. The 27-year-old suspect was pronounced dead on the scene.

"There is absolutely no worse moment on our job than this," Chief of Department Terence Monahan said in remarks at the hospital, according to a police statement.

"Brian was a great cop dedicated to keeping this city safe. In fact, just last night he arrested a man in possession of a gun in the very same precinct," Monahan said.

Officers from the Bronx Borough Anti-Crime Unit were patrolling the area because of gang activity including recent shootings, police said.

Three officers stopped the suspect for questioning when he fled, leading to a foot chase, and as Mulkeen and his partner attempted to apprehend the man a violent struggle on the ground broke out, police said.

A body-worn camera video recorded Mulkeen saying, "He's reaching for it, he's reaching for it," when several shots were fired, and Mulkeen was struck three times, police said.

Five officers at the scene fired their weapons, striking the man, who was armed with a .32-caliber revolver, police said.

The suspect, whom police did not identify, was on probation until 2022 for a narcotics-related arrest last year and he had several prior arrests including a burglary conviction, police said.

Mulkeen, who served more than six years with NYPD, was the 37th law enforcement officer killed by gunfire in the line of duty in 2019, according to Office Down Memorial Page, a website recording police deaths.

Legal setback for White House as judge blocks plan to fast-track deportations nationwide

Ruling comes as another judge blocks indefinite migrant detentions.

A federal judge ordered the Department of Homeland Security to set aside a plan that would make more people vulnerable to expedited deportation until a court can rule on the matter.

The lawsuit, filed by WeCount! and other immigration advocates, asked a Washington court to overturn a plan making undocumented people eligible for deportation without court oversight unless they could prove they had been in the country more than two years.

Judge Ketanji Brown Jackson of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia granted a preliminary injunction on Friday, setting aside the rule until it can be litigated, saying that the people represented by the immigration advocates "would be irreparably harmed by the challenged agency action."

Previously, only those immigrants detained within 100 miles (161 kilometers) of the border who had been in the country two weeks or less could be ordered rapidly deported. The policy makes an exception for immigrants who can establish a "credible fear" of persecution in their home country.

The U.S. Justice Department said in an email statement that the decision "undermines the laws enacted by Congress and the Trump Administration's careful efforts to implement those laws."

"Congress expressly authorized the Secretary of Homeland Security to act with dispatch to remove from the country aliens who have no right to be here," a department spokesman said, adding that granting the preliminary injunction "vastly exceeds the district court's own authority."

Also on Friday, a federal judge in California blocked a Trump administration rule that would have allowed indefinite detention of migrant families, saying it was inconsistent with a decades-old court settlement that governs conditions for migrant children in U.S. custody. REUTERS

Thousands rally in Moscow to demand release of jailed protesters

Kremlin opponents say jail sentences are part of a campaign to stifle dissent.

More than 20,000 Russians took to the streets of Moscow on Sunday to demand the release of protesters jailed over the summer in what opponents of the Kremlin say is a campaign to stifle dissent.

The protesters were arrested at rallies that flared in July when opposition politicians were barred from a local election. Allegations of police brutality and what many Muscovites saw as harsh jail sentences have sparked an unusual public outcry.

Several people have been sentenced to up to four years in jail, and others are being prosecuted for crimes such as violence against police officers.

On a rainy Sunday, throngs of people waved flags from an array of political groups, chanting "Let them go!" and "Freedom for political prisoners."

"No one can get a fair hearing in Russian courts — injustice and lawlessness can happen to anyone now," opposition politician Lyubov Sobol told the protesters over a sound system from a raised stage.

The protests do not pose a threat to President Vladimir Putin who won re-election by a landslide last year. But they come as his ratings have slipped following years of falling real incomes and an unpopular move to hike the retirement age.

The opposition had hoped for as big a turnout as possible, arguing that authorities would be compelled to release jailed protesters if they felt holding them could dent their ratings further.

The White Counter group which monitors political protests said it counted 25,200 people at the rally. Police put the figure at around 20,000.

The demonstration was authorized by the Moscow mayor's office, unlike several rallies in recent months where police briefly detained more than 2,000 people. No police detentions were reported Sunday.

PUBLIC OUTCRY

In the lead-up to the rally, courts freed one person on bail and dropped charges against another, rare steps that followed a public outcry. But the opposition fears those rulings may be a tactic by authorities to avoid wider concessions.

"I'm sure more people will be released because of this rally," Kremlin critic Alexei Navalny told his supporters at the protest.

The series of protests began in July when more than a dozen opposition-minded candidates were barred on a technicality from running in a Sept. 8 election to Moscow's city legislature.

> "I'm sure more people will be released because of this rally."
> Alexei Navalny

The rallies were the largest sustained protest movement in Moscow in almost a decade, peaking at around 60,000 people, before appearing to lose momentum.

The police says people were detained or prosecuted for breaking the law and that some of the protests had not been authorized and were illegal.

After his allies were barred from the vote, Navalny called on supporters to vote tactically for opponents of the ruling United Russia party, regardless of their political stripe.

United Russia, which supports Putin, lost a third of its seats in the Moscow city assembly, a setback for the authorities that Navalny said was a victory for the Kremlin's opponents even though the governing party kept its majority. REUTERS

Storm briefly became strongest on record this far north and east in the Atlantic.

NOAA CIRA

As Hurricane Lorenzo moves closer, Portugal's Azores archipelago is bracing for strong winds, heavy rain and towering waves and the country's meteorology agency IPMA said there was a more than 80 percent chance of the storm hitting the mid-Atlantic islands.

In a statement published on Sunday, IPMA said the eye of Category 4 Hurricane Lorenzo would pass "very close" to the archipelago on Wednesday, with gales of up to 125 miles per hour expected to batter some areas.

The storm briefly strengthened to a Category 5 hurricane on Saturday evening, becoming the strongest hurricane on record this far north and east in the Atlantic, but has since been downgraded.

IPMA said the western islands of Flores and Corvo are likely to be most affected, as well as the central islands of Sao Jorge, Pico, Graciosa, Faial and Terceira, one of the largest of the archipelago.

The storm is now 1,367 miles (2,200 km) southwest of Azores, IPMA said.

The National Hurricane Center, a Miami-based weather forecaster, said that "strong winds are becoming increasingly likely" in Azores on Tuesday evening and Wednesday.

Warning residents to monitor the hurricane's progress, NHC said "large swells" would continue to spread across much of the north Atlantic.

"These swells will produce life-threatening surf and rip currents," it said.

The economy of the Azores is highly dependent on industries such as agriculture, fishing and tourism which can be easily disrupted by catastrophic weather events. REUTERS

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Street fires burn in Hong Kong as China's National Day approaches

Protest chaos peaks just days before People's Republic celebrates 70 years.

Anti-government protesters face riot police as they demonstrate in Hong Kong, China, Sept. 29, 2019. REUTERS

Hong Kong police fired water cannon, rubber bullets and tear gas at petrol bomb-throwing protesters on Sunday in some of the most widespread and violent clashes in more than three months of anti-government unrest.

Running battles in the Causeway Bay shopping district, Wan Chai bar area and the Admiralty district of central government offices followed a night of showdowns with police in the Chinese-ruled city, where street fires burned as the sun set.

More protests are planned in the run-up to China's Oct. 1 National Day, marking the 70th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic.

Police fired tear gas from the roof of the Legislative Council building, which activists ransacked in early July.

Protesters, many of them dressed in black and wearing face masks, took cover from the tear gas behind umbrellas, some throwing the canisters back at police.

They built barricades with trolleys and trash cans and other debris. One threw a petrol bomb at police in the Wan Chai metro station. Others tried and failed to smash cameras over Bank of China ATMs but spray-painted the screens instead.

At least one petrol bomb landed in the grounds of central government offices where several windows were smashed. There were also street fires on the main drag of Hennessy Road.

Protesters also smashed the windows of a taxi and sprayed graffiti on the windows of businesses including Starbucks outlets. Small scuffles continued into the evening.

Police, who raise placards warning of retaliation before firing tear gas or firing water cannon in a tradition dating back to British rule, made several arrests, often after grappling people to the tarmac.

There were no immediate reports of serious injuries.

The water cannon fired blue dye, which elsewhere in the world is used to make identification of offenders easier.

Elsewhere in the city, around midday, about 200 China supporters dressed in red T-shirts gathered on top of Victoria Peak, overlooking the harbor. They sang the Chinese national anthem and chanted "I love China."

The government said that the city's leader, Carrie Lam, will be out of town for China's National Day despite her having sent invitations for celebrations at home.

Lam, the focus of weeks of anti-government unrest, will leave for Beijing on Monday to celebrate the 70th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic the following day.

Arthur, 40, wearing glasses and a mask covering the lower half of his face, said Lam's trip was expected.

> "Hong Kong looks more and more like a police state."
> "Arthur," pro-democracy protester

"In these three months, Carrie Lam has not really cared about the protesters. She only cares about the CCP (Chinese Communist Party) or what we might call 'her boss,'" he said.

"I think Hong Kong is at this moment the front line between Western democracy and the dictatorship in China ... Hong Kong looks more and more like a police state." REUTERS

Demand Soars At NYC Medical Clinic For Promising Back Pain Treatment

Can This Medical Technology Possibly Eliminate Or Greatly Reduce Even The Most Severe Back Pain... Almost Instantly?

The Advanced Medical Treatment Every Back & Neck Pain Sufferer Needs To Know - No Matter How Bad The Pain Is Or How Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NYC Pain MD is a medical clinic with two locations in New York City that has made a name for itself by treating the worst cases of back or neck pain.

Here is what every back and neck pain sufferer who has failed to respond to other treatments and does not want surgery should know about one of the best treatment options available today for severe back and neck pain including when, why and where you should consider this treatment to get maximum results.

If you suffer with back, neck or nerve pain, you have probably already tried many treatments... especially countless pain medications.

Experienced doctors understand that even though pain medications such as anti-inflammatory pain pills are part of the recommended early treatment plan for back pain... they are rarely the answer.

In most cases they have minimal, short term results (if any) and have a laundry list of potential side effects. Some being serious and even life threatening.

Are there any better options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there is very good option to help relieve the pain.

An option that a lot of back and neck pain sufferers may have never heard of before.

Before we get into these treatments, please understand this...

NYC Pain MD is a REAL medical clinic that has treated the worst cases of back pain. Patients travel from all over to be treated at one of their clinics for all sorts of joint and muscle pain because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover is a REAL medical treatment. Not some miracle cure you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no one treatment that will help every case of back pain. And we cannot guarantee this treatment will work for you. But this treatment has already helped countless back and neck pain sufferers who had given up hope. I bet many just like you.

What is this treatment? It's called...

Radiofrequency Neurotomy

"Radiofrequncy Neurotomy" is often referred to as RF for short.

RF is a procedure that is based on the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

There are many nerves around your spine and one of their jobs is to sense PAIN.

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to these nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves.

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, the Radio Frequency Neurotomy is scheduled and performed for longer term relief.

What Results Can You Expect?

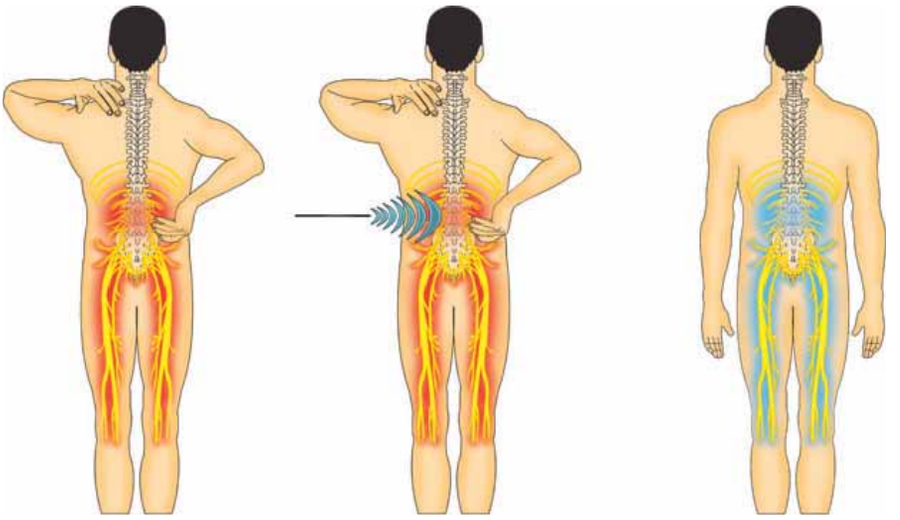
Like all real medical procedures... results vary for individual patients. No good and ethical doctor would guarantee any exact results for any procedure... that's just not how things work and it would be less than honest.

That's being said, it is not uncommon for patients to get complete, if not significant relief of their pain shortly after the treatment.

How Long Do The Results Last?

This procedure "blocks" the nerves pain signals... it does not destroy them. Therefore, the results are safe but not completely permanent. But, many patients get relief for 6 months… 12 months…. 18 months for some and some even longer. The great news is - another procedure can be safely preformed for more relief if necessary.

Advanced Treatment Uses Radio Frequencies To Relieve Serious Neck & Back Pain



Science rescues back & neck pain sufferers?: Radio Frequency Waves are used to block the nerve supply to the painful area and may alleviate pain and restore function to many.

While we cannot claim this is a complete "permanent cure" but... it can be a god-send for so many who were in constant pain.

Really... what would it be worth it to you could get out of pain for long enough so you could start enjoying your everyday life again?

Would it be worth it to be able to finally get a good nights sleep again?

How about being able to go for a simple walk or just do your basic daily chores without worrying about so much pain?

Is It Safe?

Yes. This procedure has been done countless times and continues to have an excellent safety record. It is minimally invasive and is not surgical.

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication and physical therapy do not offer good enough results.

RF has also been found effective AFTER back surgery when patient's still feel pain.

The pain after a failed back surgery can be debilitating for some and this procedure may be the only thing that helps give you relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain And The "X" Factor

Here is the "X" factor many do not consider that might be the difference between you getting the best possible treatment or not.

Many experts suggest choosing a medical clinic that offers all these treatments and has the proper, most advanced technology all under one roof without the need for a surgical center or hospital.

Major Savings In Time And Costs Of Care?

NYC Pain MD's method allows you to avoid expensive hospital or out patient surgi-center facility fees which often run 3 to 4 times the cost of the procedure itself. And you don't have to go through the huge stress and time consuming process of going all over the city to outside centers. All the NYC Pain MD treatments can be done in out in-office procedure suites saving you stress, time and dollars. NYC Pain MD believes this additional "X" factor is one of the reasons so many back pain sufferers travel from all over to be treated at one of their advanced medical clinics.

Ty Segall on letting fans into his universe with five-night residency

The prolific rocker will play some of his most beloved albums in full.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Being a fan of Ty Segall's music is not a casual pursuit. While some artists tend to create mini worlds with their output, the Laguna Beach, California-born musician has created a galaxy's worth of music with both his own music and his various side projects along the way. With the release of his newest album, "First Taste," his 17th full-length solo album in 11 years, Segall is following further down the dark psychedelic path he had forged albums like 2015's "Emotional Mugger," finding a sound that still has the garage-punk spirit of his early output but arriving somewhere completely unique.

The album has less of the smoldering guitar work that Segall has been known for, but this time around he has opted to take the music in a more synth and rhythmic-forward direction.

"Basically, I just wanted to do something I hadn't really done before, instrumentation-wise," says Segall when I talk to him on the phone one morning. "I started to collect instruments I didn't know how to play — synthesizers, this thing called a koto from Japan, Greek bouzouki, recorder, tons of different things — and basically just started making sounds with them. Another idea I had was that I wanted it to be a very drum-forward record. I realized that I hadn't really made a drum-forward record yet, and I consider drums to be almost my primary instrument in some ways. Definitely in the songs I've been writing for the past couple of years, it seems like the drums come first, in a weird way. At least for the weirder, more experimental songs, the drums seem to be the main sculptor of the song and then I add layers of other stuff."

With his backing band, Freedom Band,

Segall will be playing his new album front-to-back at five different shows starting this week, along with full performances of some of his most beloved albums: "Melted," "Goodbye Bread," "Emotional Mugger" and "Manipulator." Both "Goodbye Bread" and "Melted" show the transitional period in Segall's career that show his simplistic garage sensibilities morphing into the Hawkwind and Alice Cooper psych-assault he and his band are more interested in creating now with albums like "Emotional Mugger," "Manipulator" and, of course, his most recent.

"It was half more my style, what I wanted to play, and half what I thought what people would want to hear," says Segall on choosing these specific albums out of his massive catalog. "For instance, I wanted 'Goodbye Bread' and 'Emotional Mugger,' and those are definitely not my best-selling records, but for me those are two favorite records of mine. Then, 'Melted' and 'Manipulator' are by far my most popular records, so I felt people would be stoked to see those. So it was 50-50, half for my fun and half for what I thought people would want to hear."

Last year, Segall released three proper albums along with records with his side projects The C.I.A., with his wife Denée, and GØGGS. For a man as consistently busy and prolific, I ask him whether the people surrounding him inspire him to create more these days or if it's an engine within him that keeps propelling him forward.

"I have ideas for the band and ideas for myself," Segall says. "I think everybody, if they were honest, would say that when they make records by themselves in a basement or something, that's their own selfish, private, weird thing. That's totally awesome, but for me, in order to balance that out, I'm constantly thinking about what I can play with the band. They're so good that I want to play with them all the time. This record is a good example of both headspaces where half of the album, it's pretty much the band, where it's Charles [Moothart] and I on double drums and then sprinkling of the band everywhere. Then, the other half of the album is me in my basement by myself, so it's a perfect blend of those two things. I feel like if it was just me by myself in the basement, this album wouldn't be nearly as exciting or cool, at least in my opinion. So, I'm fully of that mindset."

Make sure to catch Ty Segall and Freedom Band in town this week at the following venues: Oct. 1 at Brooklyn Steel ("First Taste" + "Melted"); Oct. 2 at Bowery Ballroom ("First Taste" + "Melted"); Oct. 3 at Bowery Ballroom ("First Taste" + "Goodbye Bread"); Oct. 4 at Bowery Ballroom ("First Taste" + "Emotional Mugger"); and Oct. 5 at Brooklyn Steel ("First Taste" + "Manipulator").

Don't mess with Helen McCrory

The actress talks progression of series and epic buildup in "Peaky Blinders" season 5.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

In the epic gangster family series "Peaky Blinders" there is always a lot of action going on. Over the course of five seasons, some would say the explosions have gotten bigger, the fights bloodier and the characters more colorful than ever. With the series' lifeline plot mounting on the success of the combative Shelby family, it's easy to see why the addicting story line's only option is to escalate. With the highly anticipated season 5 in the midst, many are wondering what could be in store for the band of polarizing individuals that make up the Peaky Blinders. Helen McCrory, who plays the fiercely sharp matron of the family, Polly Gray, sat down with Metro to give the scoop on season 5, talk the progression of the characters, and dive into why the violence in the show is completely warranted and even essential.

A lot has happened over the past five seasons. I'm curious to see what progressions you've personally seen with your character, Polly Gray?

Polly is an interesting character. She's tough as old boots but there's a big difference between being tough as old boots and killing someone, you know? When she gave herself to Sam Neill's character in the second series and then shot him at the end of that and said the line for the first time, "Don't f—k with the Peaky Blinders" — I've literally had that shouting in my head for the last four years. That was surprising to me, when he took her there. But that's the joy of Steve Knight's writing. He doesn't decide, OK, so Polly is going to be the straight one and the strong one, therefore she's not going to go here. Instead, he says, no, this can all happen to Polly. Like her son coming back or her near-death experience which leads her to hear voices. You think, OK, well what is this? Has she taken too many drugs or something? But Steve will say, "Oh no, no ... She really hears voices." He's constantly pushing the boundaries with her, which is fantastic. I sort of know where I'm going next year already and immediately I thought, really? Wow, why not? That's the fun part of playing Polly and working on "Peaky Blinders." We always have discussions over the characters. It's never to do with the money, it's to make sure you have a good script.

The series is known for being quite shocking, with twists and turns happening every season. What have been some of the more surprising moments for Polly?

Well, when my kid was alive, for one. That was quite a shock when Michael came back. I really thought he was dead. I mean, I spent so much time weeping over his death. I've also been quite surprised about how many men I've gotten through at their age — those scenes are always fun. Polly's not married, so why not?

How do you get yourself into the "Peaky Blinders" mindset?

For me, it's the clothes and it's the walk. I'll always wear that same tight silhouette because I believe there is something quite strangled about Polly. She's always pushing against something. But whenever I have my first scene with Cillian [Murphy], I'm always back in that headspace. It's Tommy who really grounds Polly.

What's your take on some people claiming the show has gotten more violent?

I don't know if it's gotten more violent, but I think the violence is different. If you remember the first season and the first few scenes, where people were shell-shocked when they came into the pub and started shooting ... You just had these scenes were everything explodes. But I think the mental scars that the war gave those men have impacted the violence. But perhaps it's more palatable for people in the first few series because it was clearly a result of the brutality that they had seen. People forget we're only talking about four years later. At that time, people were violent and people were tough. These men came back from two World Wars and shook and screamed at night because of it. War is brutal. It's very hard to escape the cruelty and that's why, when you talk about the violence, you should look away from the violence. It should disgust you. That's a healthy way of things.

What's in store for fans for season 5?

Steve's writing is just superb and [season 5] is almost like a portrait of Tommy's mind unraveling. Steve talks about ideas all of the time: Can you run away from your past? These people who are criminals in the beginning, can money free them? Can they become apart of society? Can you do that and can you transform yourself? Or will you always be dragged back and reminded of who you are? I think some characters can, but with Tommy, you find him just getting iller and iller as the season goes on, and there's such a cacophony of pain in his mind — and I love that. I love the fact that Cillian himself looks like he's sculpted by Michael Angelo but he's just this tortured being and constantly the past comes back to him. But, as we learn, it's always better to go on than to turn around.

"Peaky Blinders" season 5 drops on Netflix Oct. 4.

Music, feelings and vulnerability

Lauv gives Metro the scoop on his "autobiographical" album and worldwide tour.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Many have heard the unique synthesizing beats and catchy songs produced and performed by singer-songwriter Lauv. The "I Like It Better" artist broke into the music scene in 2015, and since then has amassed a loyal fan base. But for the 24-year-old, music is so much more than a catchy way to get people dancing; it's a catharsis. Lauv has hit the top of the charts with his catalog, but he's also broken down the stigma of hiding your problems and shadowing life's frailties. In fact, Lauv's latest album, "How I'm Feeling," does the exact opposite. What the popular musician wants the world to know is exactly what is going on in his head, the good and bad, and to him, there is nothing more admirable than the strength of being vulnerable. Lauv sat down with Metro to talk about his interesting outlook on his latest album, his tour, and why being present in the moment is truly the best way to find yourself.

You've said before that you have written beautifully tragic music since a young age. What inspires you and your writing process?
It's actually evolved over the years. When I was 18, I put out 17 songs just about one girl, just all of the ups and downs of that relationship and trying to figure myself out and my identity through that whole experience. But all of the stuff from the new album, "How I'm Feeling," has been super diverse. I've started to be inspired in different ways, not just about love and hopeless romanticism and stuff. It's more about just really anything in my life at this moment. I have autobiographical songs, existential songs, and obviously songs about love and break-ups. But there are also songs about my dog, my favorite bars, ... literally just everything from my life. It's a really cool place to be at, very cathartic.

You utilize a lot of musical gadgets, using synth sounds and other tools. Are you excited to see what technological advancements come out in the coming years?
For sure. Production-wise, for me, I like my songs to be classic at their core, but I get bored if I don't sonically do something kind of weird and kind of different. Whenever I do get bored, I always just look to download a bunch of random sounds and find random samples and so on and so forth. So definitely, I think if music keeps on growing, it'll be exciting. I love utilizing all of that.

With your album "How I'm Feeling," you are releasing the songs as they are made instead of altogether. What element does that add to the listening experience for viewers?
There are a couple of reasons as to why I did that. One of the big reasons was because [for] a lot of 2018, I was sort of mentally going downhill and I wasn't very productive. I was supposed to be working on the album, but truthfully it just wasn't working out. So when I started to get back into a better place mentally, I kind of realized that I didn't want to wait until the whole album was done, or keep people waiting. I wanted to put stuff out as it was ready. So that was a big part of the reason as to why I did that. I also was putting out songs that felt like they needed to be immediate — just put them out right away and say, here they are.

Are there any songs that stick out to you from your new album?
Totally. I think, for me, an important one is "Drugs & the Internet," because that song is so different for me. It came out of a really weird time in my life, so that song I think marks a big kind of shift for me as an artist.

You already have some great collaborations in your collection, but are you itching to collaborate with anyone else in the future?
I think the big one I'm dying to do is Coldplay. Working with Chris Martin would be incredible.

Now, jumping to your tour, what do you like the most about getting to perform your music live in front of audiences?
That's a hard question, but I think one of the biggest things, for me, are the unexpected moments that happen every night. When I totally get lost in the moment, things happen or I learn something new about myself or about a song or even about my fans. I could have a certain interaction with someone in the audience that just is a human experience. I think that's the best part: when everyone is totally lost in the moment. It's a rare thing to do. People spend so much time in their own heads, it can be hard to connect like that. I think when the show is happening, people are really all there together.

Would you say every show is different, even energy-wise?
For sure. It's kind of hard to pin down exactly how it works, but every night is different. Some nights are drastically different. I think it has to do with my energy, the energy of the people there and just kind of what random things happen. So that's a really fun aspect.

What do you hope audiences take away from attending one of your shows?
I think the big thing for me has to do with this project that I've started while touring the past few years called "My Blue Thoughts." It's actually evolving right now, so it's going to expand. But basically, I leave a box out and I encourage people to write whatever is on their mind or whatever thoughts they have in a way that's cathartic for them. Music has allowed me to really have this big catharsis about what I'm feeling and I wanted to give everybody in the audience an opportunity to do the same thing and have a chance to learn about themselves or to maybe realize something about themselves and to be vulnerable. That's the biggest thing for me, to get people to be vulnerable.

New black hole simulation

National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) has recently presented a completely new visualization of what black holes look like. And it is actually mesmerizing! The image, created by Jeremy Schnittman using a custom software at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center, shows that the gravity of a black hole is so intense it can distort its environment like a mirror. 2019-20 NHL preview: Lightning rebound to take Stanley Cup Metro looks ahead at the 2019-20 NHL season, which starts up on Wednesday.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

For a second straight season, the Toronto Maple Leafs kick off a new year as the puck drops on the 2019-20 NHL season on Tuesday night in Canada against the Ottawa Senators.

It's been a rocky offseason for the Leafs. Star forward Mitch Marner has not signed a contract extension yet while Auston Matthews has run into some off-ice troubles.

The team that was expected to make a run at the Stanley Cup last year was bounced out of the first round last year as Cinderella stories reigned supreme.

While the New York Islanders shocked the hockey world and recorded their best season since the dynasty days of the 1980s, the President's Trophy-winning Tampa Bay Lightning were swept out of the first round by the Columbus Blue Jackets.

We saw the Carolina Hurricanes make the Eastern Conference Final, no Canadian teams make it past the third round, and the St. Louis Blues win their first-ever Stanley Cup title by defeating the Boston Bruins.

Will 2019-20 provide as many surprises?

We'll try to figure that out:

Jones, Giants win second straight, take care of Redskins

GETTY IMAGES

There were some growing pains in Daniel Jones' second career start for the Giants, but the 22-year-old helped lead New York to a 24-3 win over the Washington Redskins on Sunday.

The Giants' first-round pick completed the afternoon going 23-of-31 for 225 yards and one touchdown pass, while the defense held the Redskins to 219 total yards and picked off the ball four times. Case Keenum was held to just 37 yards before he was pulled from the game for Dwayne Haskins.

"Great team win. It was great to see our defense have success and we can build on that as we move forward," New York head coach Pat Schumer told reporters. "I thought our quarterback did a good job. … I thought for the most part he battled and was gritty, and did the things necessary."

At times, Jones looked brilliant for the Giants, driving down the field during New York's first two possessions of the day. The opening drive saw the rookie QB march the Giants 46 yards down the field and cap it off with a six-yard touchdown pass to Wayne Gallman.

Jones took the Giants 86 yards on his next drive and Gallman marched the ball into the end zone on a one-yard run.

Things took a turn for Jones on the next two drives as he threw back-to-back interceptions, with one resulting in the Redskins hitting a 21-yard field goal to cut the Giant lead to 14-3.

However, the turn of events didn't faze the Giants rookie. Jones took the Giants on a 10-play, 70-yard drive to set up Aldrick Rosas for a 30-yard field goal.

"That speaks to his resiliency," Schumer said about Jones' bounce-back. "He had a great week of practice and it showed up on the field. Having a good week of practice doesn't guarantee success on Sunday, but he went out there and did it. I'm pleased and happy for him."

Jabrill Peppers added to the Giants' lead in the third quarter when he picked off a pass intended for Jeremy Sprinkle. Peppers ran the interception back 32 yards to put New York in front, 24-3.

The win gave new life to a Giants season that once looked bleak after they started 0-2. Now 2-2 with strong performances out of Jones and an improved defensive performance, things look more optimistic with the Minnesota Vikings next on the schedule.

The win seems especially impactful with the Giants doing it without star running back Saquon Barkley. He has been sidelined with high ankle sprain and is expected to miss at least a month.

"This is where I hoped we'd be after today, 2-2. We'll figure it out from there," Schumer said.

Haskins made his NFL debut in the Loss for Washington. He completed 9-of-17 for 107 yards and was picked off three times. CHRISTIAN ARNOLD

Rangers close out play at Globe Life Park with win over Yankees

Texas Rangers' last game at Globe Life Park in Arlington saw 6-1 victory over Yankees.

REUTERS

Lance Lynn allowed one run on two hits over 7 1/3 innings to pick up his 16th win of the season and lead the Texas Rangers to a 6-1 victory over the New York Yankees in the final baseball game played at Globe Life Park in Arlington, Tex.

Shin-Soo Choo doubled and walked three times and scored two runs, Ronald Guzman had two RBIs and Elvis Andrus and Jose Trevino both had two hits for Texas (78-84), which will move across the street and play in Globe Life Field next season. The $1.1 billion stadium, which will have a retractable roof, would have come in handy on Sunday when the temperature was 93 degrees for the first pitch.

Lynn (16-11) walked one and struck out 10 and retired the final 14 batters he faced to finish to 10-1 in 16 home starts.

Aaron Judge hit his 27th homer, one of just three hits for New York (103-59). The East Division champion Yankees finished the season with 306 home runs, one fewer than the major league record set by the Central Division champion Minnesota Twins, whom they face in the American League Division Series beginning Friday night at Yankee Stadium.

Masahiro Tanaka (11-9) took the loss and allowed two runs (one earned) on five hits over three innings in his first relief appearance in 164 major league games.

Texas took a 1-0 lead in first inning when Choo led off with a walk, advanced to second on an infield single by Andrus, took third on a double steal and scored when catcher Gary Sanchez's throw bounced into left field for an error.

Judge tied it in the third with a 408-foot homer to left, but the Rangers took the lead for good in the bottom half of the inning when Choo, who had lined a double to left and advanced to third on a single by Andrus, scored on an errant pick-off throw by Tanaka. Andrus then made it 3-1 on an RBI single by Danny Santana.

Guzman extended the lead to 5-1 in the fifth with a two-run single, and Willie Calhoun added a sacrifice fly in the sixth to end the scoring.

Texas finished with a 1,145-936 record in regular season games at Globe Life Park which opened on April 11, 1994. The Rangers open their new stadium on March 31, 2020, against the Los Angeles Angels.
